

The Diploma in Training and Education in Supported Employment Transcript

The Diploma in Training and Education in Supported Employment is accredited by the National University of Ireland, Galway. It provides participants from the whole of Ireland - North and South - with a broad understanding of Supported Employment as a model of service delivery.

Our graduates are staff and managers working in mainstream supported employment service, vocational training, sheltered occupational services and staff working with other groups seeking social inclusion through work.

This course will suit aspiring job facilitators / developers, job coaches, employment officers, those who work in Government supported employment programmes and those working at special schools or colleges, who assist people to make the transition into integrated employment.

As a graduate of this programme, you will have access to the third year of two Honours Degree programmes - the Honours BA degree in Training and Education and the Honours BA degree in Applied Social Studies (Disability)
